"We are taking technology to the next level through this new gameplay engine," said Richard Swanger, lead gameplay designer. "FIFA learned from Real Madrid's exclusive partnership with Player Metrics and the LA Galaxy's training agreement with Motion Analysis. We are now leveraging player metrics to reach heights we've never seen before." "These levels of analysis will give you the most refined simulation of skill on the planet," added Gianni Morbidelli, senior gameplay designer. "From comprehensive player education to analytically fine-tuned ball physics, the core of FIFA has changed to what it should always have been: player simulation." Key metrics of player movement and movement in, out and around the ball will be calculated and analyzed at the heart of the FIFA 22 engine. This data will give the player the most accurate reactions on the pitch. This results in more dynamic, more realistic animation than in past versions of the game. Each artificial intelligence will use the core metrics and the real-life data collected from real-life football matches to quickly and dynamically come to conclusions to minimize the actions of the player. For example, AI will always know where a player should be by using player metrics. What is more, Player Metrics and Player Motion Capture data are combined together to give players an accurate recognition of their surroundings. "Real Madrid and EA are committed to producing the most accurate, most realistic football simulation in the world," said Real Madrid's Director of Football Relations, Jose Maria Bartiromo. "The measurement and analysis of data from real-life football matches will enable us to fully immerse players in the most convincing football experience in the world." The new Interactive Player Experience allows skilled players to be more confident of their own performance, which will lead to better decision-making. "I believe it is the most dynamic game I have played," said Barcelona defender Gerard Pique. "Every player's performance has been different, and all teams played very well. I am happy with the result, and I can't wait to play again." Gamers will be able to completely adjust player animations, with over 45,000 animations in 12 key areas of gameplay, including sprinting, striking, shooting, passing, dribbling, heading and more. This means that all players will have Psychometric properties of the HIV social support scale. Few instruments measure the level of social support that individuals living with HIV receive from their social networks, and none assess the psychological impact of social support. This paper reports on the psychometric properties of the HIV Social Support Scale (HSSS). Participants were 35 HIV-positive, predominantly men-who-have-sex-with-men, community members recruited from a number of HIV advocacy organizations. Confirmatory factor analysis indicated that the five-factor, 15-item HSSS has strong psychometric properties. Interitem associations varied widely. The HSSS was acceptable and demonstrated excellent internal consistency. The HSSS can be a useful addition to existing measures of perceived social support. Further research is needed to more precisely measure the psychological impact of social support.
