Defenders of the West is a game that takes place in an old west style. It's heavily inspired by classic westerns such as The Magnificent Seven, High Noon and El Dorado. You'll be tasked with stopping a small army of bandits that are on a mass robbery mission. They are quite ruthless and will stop at nothing to get their hands on the gold. You'll have to deploy a variety of land, air and sea towers to stop them. As you progress through the game you'll be able to unlock new towers, perks, abilities and more! Extensive level editor: You can easily change the layout of the levels and change environments and enemies to your heart's content. There are many different kinds of levels to play through and you can even create your own custom levels! Shoot your way through: Choose from a wide variety of types of turrets ranging from standard machine guns to triple barrel cannons with limited ammo. Collect cash to buy new turrets and upgrade them! Hire unique characters to help you along the way. Aim, Shoot, Speed up and Win! Your mission is to stop the bandits by setting up and playing a variety of turrets. Collect cash by shooting the enemies and buying new turrets. Each level is different and takes place in a different location. Each level ends with a boss fight. Defeat the boss and collect the rest of the cash. The more money you collect, the more turrets you can buy! There are 3 levels of difficulty to choose from depending on how much cash you have available and how skilled you want to play. Towers on all 3 levels can be upgraded further. Special rules and bonuses apply on certain levels! Defenders of the West is a total of 3 levels of game modes. It includes the campaign mode where you play through all 3 levels as many times as you like, 3 free play modes and leaderboards! The campaign mode is also used to unlock new characters and turrets to buy. Collect cash to unlock new characters and turrets. Full Editor Features: - Build your own custom levels with various layers, obstacles, turrets and more - Change every aspect of the level, level design and enemy placement - Create a level that's unique to you and is different than anyone else! - Build stages that feature different game modes like normal, time trial and arcade - Play up to 3 different maps per level - Defend yourself through 3 levels - Play through

In game dev studio we are developing 3D platformer with the newest technologies. We create games with bigger themes like love, death, philosophy, ideology, art and other more. You can experience this in our game King of Congo, where you have to represent one of three goals in the fight against the evil empire. The game is about a king, whose actions will determine the future of his land. The game is inspired by many games of the last decade, like Kingdom Rush, Diablo and Breath of the Wild. In the near future you can play this game for free on our own servers - but starting this spring you are able to play and see the game in a game court. There are differences between the game court and the "real" servers. On the game court you don't have to download any game client. You can be away from your computer all day and always be online. If you want to play on the game court, check out the links below. Official website: Facebook: Hi! I'm new in the youtube gaming world (I've been exploring this world for weeks) and today I want to talk about an RPG called Desolation Row. I'm going to play it with not only a normal PC, but also with Oculus Rift. I'm going to try both the PC and the Oculus Rift in parallel, because they're going to play very different.

What's new in Warhammer 40,000: Armageddon - Ork Hunters:

Twice a year, egg-laying adult female sea turtles are tracked by researchers. During the summer months the female sea turtles lay their eggs in open waters. Over the winter months some of these hatchlings become stranded on beaches. Other turtles will fill their nests with sand and be on their way to the ocean. And some new recruits will be born. Using telemetry tags attached to the shells of the hatchlings, researchers follow the turtle's migration to the ocean and monitor their body condition as they travel. "Tracking sea turtles is difficult — they rarely come to the beach, and even if they do, they usually don't stay out on the beach — they just crawl under the surf," said Ben White, a University of Victoria graduate student from Brisbane, Australia, who conducts sea turtle research on Vancouver's southern end. "Not a lot of people could do what we do because at some point we need the turtles to swim back out to sea and most of the time we need to be out the next morning." All summer long White has called dozens of research volunteers to canvass the beach, looking for sea turtles through binoculars. By early in the morning they often find just one or two new-born turtles stranded on the beach. If the beach is small there may be many. Each day is usually a race against time to get the turtles out of the sand or — at night — record some data on the turtle's body condition. According to White, these young turtles with no name, no way of telling their gender, or even whether they were actually born in the area, all have to be released back into the ocean because they don't have any navigation skills. They don't know how to get back to the nesting beach and may not recognise it anyway. As they follow the birth place of their mothers, researchers like White are a vital part of recovery efforts. "The greater Vancouver Island shoreline is a low-relief coast, meaning people are building their homes on the sand," said White. "Often they're really close to the beach. Occasionally things can happen — a storm can come, and people can get washed over the dunes to the beach. If a storm can harm a nesting turtle it's already harmed itself because the nutrients in the sand have all been washed away." The

FUNNET MUSHROOM BOY has been crafted by local students working to make a new niche in the industry. Dedicated to the community we are hard at work developing our next indie game project. In the first version of this game, we are offering 8 different levels with 12 activities and are looking for inspiration on the process and feedback on the game. A: Look at Shiver, it was done by a lot of students as a student project. Shiver: A Fog Shooter Game A wonderfully brief fun game where you control a lone plant that must clear the fog. The closer the fog gets to the edges, the faster it dissipates. Using only your mouse and an iphone, you will need to guide the plant over and through the fog. It was recently published for sale on IndieGameStand and it was the top non-paid on IGS this week. Q: Couldn't generate an atlas for file (null) I'm trying to use iOS7 Google Analytics SDK with an iOS6 project. Everything works fine, I just have a UIViewController for which I use a Google Map, which is created with this code: self.googleMap = [[GMSMapView alloc] initWithFrame:CGRectMake(0, 0, self.view.frame.size.width, self.view.frame.size.height)]; self.googleMap.settings.myLocationButton = YES; [self.view addSubview:self.googleMap]; [self.googleMap setDelegate:self]; [self.googleMap sendEvent:@"more info" toTrack:kGAIUSId]; self.googleMap.camera = GMSCameraPosition.camera(withLatitude: latitude, longitude: longitude, zoom: zoom); The problem is this: I have this code that i'm doing to generate a new map every time I load a view controller: ... GAIDictionaryBuilder *builder = [GAIDictionaryBuilder createScreenView]; [builder set:@"Map View" withValue:@"map" forKey:@"browserType"]; GAIDictionary *options = [builder build]; [GAI fetch:@"maps//map?v=removedVersion"

// tagx A: I have just run into a similar issue. Quick search told me there is a known issue with internet explorer and some of its components. If this is your case, try using google Chrome instead which should fix it. Otherwise, a possible temporary work-around is to insert a little piece of code into your web browser. If you are using IE8, sometimes the problem may be resolved by inserting this piece of code: Further info here: Chibotaru-Numazu West Line The is a line of the East Japan Railway Company (JR East) running from Takachiho to Tōmi in Chiba Prefecture.
